

SYMS

The Society of Young Mathematicians (SYMS) is a society for all young people who enjoy mathematics, whether they are in a primary or secondary school. Members are part of a national organisation which motivates and encourages young mathematicians.

Journals

Every term members receive the SYMS Newsletter - SYMmetryplus, which contains short articles, news, things to do, calculator hints, book reviews, games, puzzles and competitions. Members also receive termly copies of the journal Mathematical Pie. Again, Mathematical Pie contains interesting maths problems, puzzles and articles. SYMS encourages and supports mathematical activities for young mathematicians of all ages. Adults are very welcome to join SYMS.

SYMS members will receive SYMmetryplus and Mathematical Pie delivered direct to their homes.

All young people interested in mathematics should join The Society of Young Mathematicians NOW!

SYMS is run by the Mathematical Association. More information about SYMS and details of how to join can be found at <http://www.m-a.org.uk/syms>.
